Poorly.
They're likely going to try several things:
1) A sort of CCC part-2 government spending program/set of programs.
2) A push for UBI.
3) Increasing public indebtedness, and bailing out big-business.
Possibly,

4) More pushing small businesses out of business for banks and big business.

Look for increased pushes for H1B, and favoring foreigners and the politically-powerful (like big-business owners) at the expense of the Citizen.

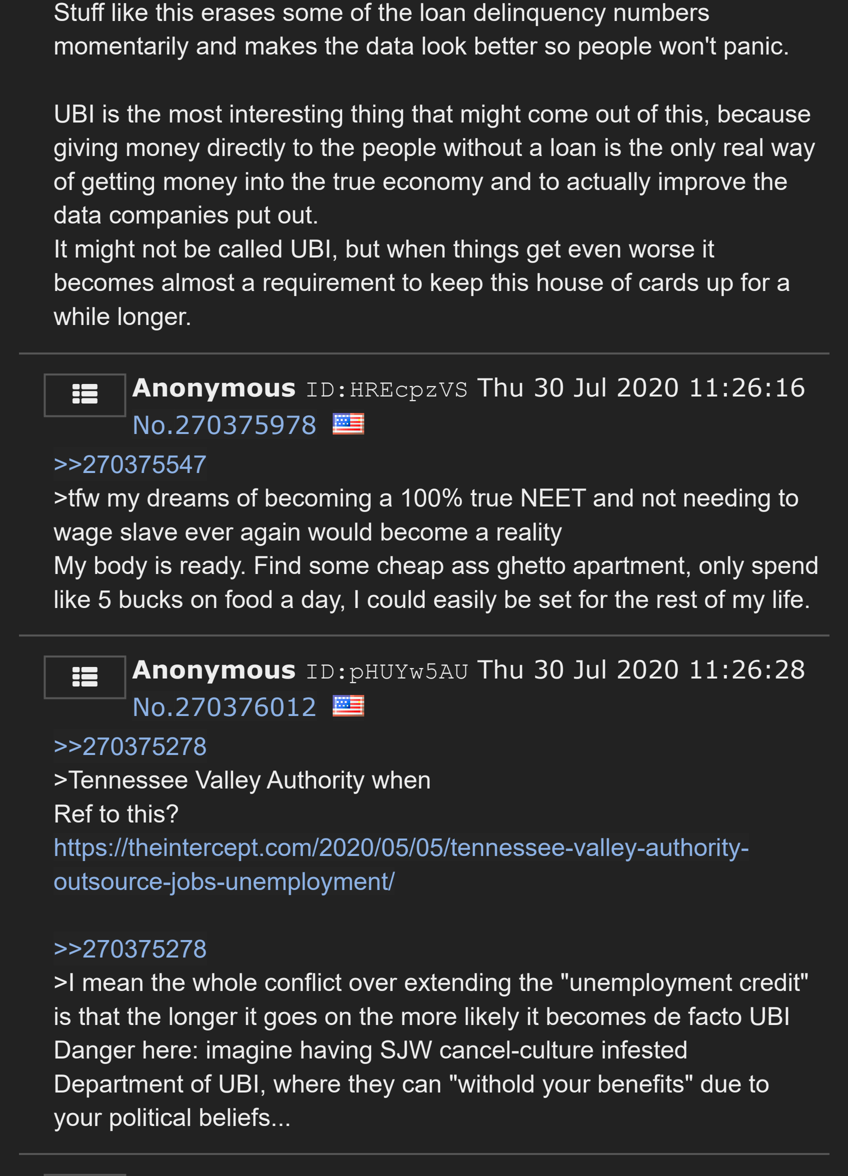
Basically what anon above me stated.

They'll run the whole thing into the ground by doing what they're doing now, but only increasingly more aggressively. It's really the only thing they can do.

They'll also try to hide the problems by all kinds of programs, like the forbearance program they have going on with the real estate loans. It means you don't have to pay anything for a while. The government covers it from the stimulus package.



Stuff like this erases some of the loan delinquency numbers momentarily and makes the data look better so people won't panic.

UBI is the most interesting thing that might come out of this, because giving money directly to the people without a loan is the only real way of getting money into the true economy and to actually improve the data companies put out.
It might not be called UBI, but when things get even worse it becomes almost a requirement to keep this house of cards up for a while longer.

I will respond here and in the new thread.

Basically nothing can prepare you for the collapse if you are doing just ok financially right now.

The thing that I proposed though would be a good hedge for a market crash, that's it. Unfortunately the paper is supported by a myrriad companies that claim to have silver in their vaults.

It's pretty obvious that they don't, so it's only a scheme to make some money and sell it at the top. Not meant to hold.

Hold is only for the physical.

Is jewelry taxed as well?
Because there is plenty of 999 silver jewelry that you can buy here and there for about spot.
Let me look on Ebay and show you. People who sell it very often don't understand that they are selling pure silver so the gram for gram price of such jewelry is better than buying rounds.

Don't hold. That's one thing that you can be sure of.
I don't know what are the interest rates in your country but in the US they are abysmal and thus the cash loses value every year.
I'm investing in a business that raises good, home protection dogs, also bought silver and some gold.
Another thing is that I hold money in the bank only necessary to pay bills.
I own my own business to of course I invest in it.
Basically the thing is to try and beat the inflation.
If I believed that the hyperinflation will come I would go in debt to my eyeballs but I don't believe that it's coming. Inflation will be high, just look at the number of printing that's going on around the world right now, but I highly doubt it's going to be in high double digits.

Just read it. Yes, he is talking about what I'm talking about and the price of gold doesn't reflect the fact that China, possibly may have half the gold they say they have. Which would mean that they are much worse off than we think.
Which would mean that gold should go up substantially and yet it isn't.
I mean I know it's "expensive " right now but if China is fucked then the price of gold should do x2 or so.
Now India's gold reserves also supposedly grew but no one knows.
I suspect that a lot of the companies that participate in the paper gold market don't have half of the gold that they claim to have. The run on the vaults should happen any moment now because this info is going to dawn on people sooner or later.
I'm in silver trade so I know more about silver and the shortages on the market. I know it first hand and I'm a plankton but work with some huge refiners on the daily basis and some of them started to charge premiums on their junk silver as well. That never happened before, so I know that silver is going to be allowed to double in paper price because the paper is chasing the physical so in order to avoid the run on vaults they have to catch up. I'm pretty certain that the new price will be around the 2011 $49 for now, but how big the shortages really are it should go even higher. It's madness out in the business. Some people, like me are hoarding as well. I sell what I have to, but don't scrap at all.

I asked here for some source on e-commerce because I'm so much up since March, selling freaking jewellery it's unbelievable.
Anecdotal info from other people in the business also points to people buying like crazy. Not only jewelry, also other non essential shit.
At the same time I'm told every fucking week, from the same people that buy $500 from me that they aren't paying their mortgage and their rent.
A lot of the banks allowed for the people not to pay their mortgage for months. Then they turned around and "sounded the alarm" of people not paying the mortgages. They did it so they get fucking gibs from the government....and they are getting it.
There is so much cheap money on the market it's unbelievable.

The talk about reducing the gibs is just it, the talk.
The Democrats won't get their stupid progressive wish list but everything that they proposed in gibs to the people will pass. That is if the Democrats won't simply block any talks...which they might. On the othwr hand I think they aren't suicidal so they will "compromise" and 3 trillion dollar gibsmedat Act will pass.
Trump just said "I love the people and I want them to get more money" (paraphrasing) and he is talking about the second stimulus check. It's going to be more than 1.2k this time.

What Trump is proposing(direct check and unchanged unemployment benefits) is actually a good strategy but the Republicans are chosing this fucking hill to die on. There are talks about a stop gap because the people are getting pissed off that the "lawmakers" have a recess. It's like both parties are taking vacations in the mids of "people dying" propaganda.
It's like the vote on which party is going to fuck themselves more with these shenanigans.

Limit physical cash transactions by businesses to consumers to something like $100. (muh germs, muh crime). Makes cash hoarding kind of useless.
Now that cash is electronic and captive, we gradually drop the interest rate to 5%. This is to give wealthy people enough time to pivot to assets.
Keep refinancing national debts at negative rates. Try to find the sweet spot where inflation is not hyper and countries are almost paid to carry deficits.
Add in UBI once assets are redistributed away from the middle and lower classes.
Move to an entirely service based, sharing economy where poor people don't need to own anything.
Create a regional bloc currency for the upper classes. Leave the old currency coexisting for poors and people with shit social credit. The old currency can be restricted to specific classes of purchases and is basically glorified food and rent stamps.
Congratulate yourself and prepare to shut off the accounts of anyone who socially dissents.

Yeah, I mean, either way, the GOP plan is to drop it from $600 to $200. So it's already a 66% contraction. The difference between cutting 66% and 100% actually isn't probably significant enough to stave off too many evictions and foreclosures anyhow. Even in the rose-colored scenario where they hack out a compromise, economics are looking grim.

Absolutely correct.
There are a shit ton of underpriced pure silver jewelry on sites like Ebay.
You can buy 16g of pure silver (.6ozt) for about $15. Still more than the ounce of pure silver but if the tax is 30% it may be cheaper. There is on us company in particular that produces pure silver and I buy it as "sterling " all the time. I don't know their name, just their logo but their jewelry isn't Chink made and is solid. If anyone needs it I can take the picture of the tag and show it to you so you know what you are buying they also make sterling which is .925 but a shit load of their jewelry is marked .999 and is really pure silver.

Edgelords online are saying that. But can it possibly be true? Over the course of 2020, my envelope math says 34.7% of American workers lost a job. Not all stayed on unemployment, many found other work. But it probably came with pay cuts. I know lots of people personally who either lost a job, or took pay/benefit reductions, or got furloughed. Employment to population ratio has never been this low.

I wrote that the unemployment numbers are scary, not that the unemployment is that high. I know a lot of people that are claiming the "under employment " and taking the full employment benefits because the states allow it.
I would like to see the numbers that categorize the unemployment number broken down by people who claim that they unemployed and the people who claim that they are working less now and still collect the check.
Then I could extrapolate some actual predictions.
I think that the perception is everything though. And the perception is that people think the economy is in the shitter and that the citizens are starving. It isn't necessarily the truth, but I don't know what's true because everything is politicized and getting straight numbers seems impossible.

Also I wouldn't underestimate Trumps willingness to go completely crazy and give the nig corps the gibs bit I highly doubt that H1B will be thr way to go for him. Not before the elections and thr overwhelming perception that the country is fucked.
I'm not saying that Trump is a political genius but he generally has a good sense of the politics. He makes mistakes, obviously and the biggest one was how he handled the Covid at first.
He got trapped while he should have came out and say that we will follow Sweden in how we handle the virus. That way we would avoid the lockdowns and he wouldn't have to do what he's doing now.
Also H1B, let's be honest aren't jobs that the Americans wont fo.

We've basically reached the point where the majority of people don't need to work, you have the essential industries like agriculture, utilities, and energy that physically maintain civilization and they employ only a tiny fraction of the population now. the rest of the population are basically just involved in the production, transportation, and marketing of useless shit. But now automation has reached the point where barely anybody needs to work in manufacturing even and physical retail is replaced by the internet, instead of physical hobbies people just consume electronic entertainment. So really most people don't need to work there is simply nothing to do, most jobs before the pandemic were basically just busy work grifter jobs which is why they can all disappear and things go on as normal

I work in the medical sciences. 70% of our workforce is foreign-born, most on H1Bs. The jobs beyond the position most of these people fill are impossible to get because the market is fucking flooded with highly skilled individuals, including Americans. The idea that H1B isn’t a sham is laughable. I wish we could send most of them home too because they bitch about America and tell us why their home country is so much better while surviving on the generosity of the American taxpayer and citizen.

The unemployment thing is interesting because all the talk I'm hearing is that they are pushing it off on the individual states to make up the difference.
If it goes down this way, alot of blue states are going to have a difficult time meeting those obligations.

>Depression level financials

Wow, it's almost as if when governments tell by force over 30% of the U.S. Workforce (who are generally young and healthy) that they can't return to work or reopen their businesses without facing hefty fines or jail time because of a virus that disproportionately effects the already sick and elderly (and that they've been incorrect about almost every step of the way in regards to doing the correct solution) would negatively effect the flow of goods and services. Also being complicit in the rioting and looting of cites isn't helping. Maybe if they would let people return to work, things can maybe start to return to normal.

Unfortunately the amount of businesses that will never recover from this is very large, I just hope that the people realize this is mostly state and local government forcing these shutdowns upon them. The media isn't helping by aiding with the spread of fake news and censorship of anything going against the narrative.

>I suspect that the idea was to sacrifice the "resilient young people's jobs" for the sake of Boomers, and then try to "flip a switch" when things were done.

Sorry, but rebuilding artificially/forced bankrupt businesses isn't like that.

> when things were done

The problem with this is, this would have worked if they manned up and did the 3 or 4 week hard quarantine shutdown like everyone feared would happen in the beginning. The issue is everyone in government pussy footed around and still allowed several places to remain open as "essential" businesses while shutting down others.

Nobody wanted to be the bad guy, especially our governorin Arizona. They should have mandated the quarantine if flipping the switch after it's over was the intent. Dragging it out for months with non uniform policy has caused this situation we're in.

There is work out there though. I have not stopped working since covid happened, if anything, I've been working even harder. The issue is most of the jobs that were lost were low skill wagie jobs or high paying mental non physical labor, so most out of work could not, or simply refuse to go back to work at a still working trade. I don't feel bad for those out of work since there is plenty still going on out there.

All I have to say is trump is not an expert in viruses or whatever, which is why he surrounded himself with "experts". He has based his announcements and recommendations on the advice and guidance he received from said experts. The "experts" have been wrong on almost every prediction they have made since the beginning. Really the only beneficial thing that happened was the early travel restrictions put in place against the guidance of his "experts". His announcement of no risk to usa in February, fauci. His announcement of 250k-1 mil dead by the first week of April, fauci. His announcement of no face masks required early on, fauci. Then the one thing they do get right, him and birx take all the credit for social distancing claiming they were completely responsible for the falling numbers.

Then the best one, ask if the democrats claiming the virus is not political, and at every chance they get, they call it the TRUMP!!VIRUS!¡ I find it ironic that the democrats calling the early travel ban racist and encouraging people to go out and party on Chinese New Year never stuck to them.

The dems are going to full court press the hoax virus into the election. It is their only chance. The blue states will start shutting down, school cancelled, sports cancelled, the maximum shutdown and economic pain they can inflict. To counter this, Trump and the fed will have to do massive printing and stimulus checks. I think long QQQ/short SPY could do well, and also gold and silver. It seems like they are manipulating gold and silver lower, it should already be much higher with the printing and physical shortage. If they lose control both could moon. I own SPY November $222 puts, QQQ shares, and january 2021 $19 SLV calls.

This has to be some generic "crap job" like a warehouse, labor, or servant type job. Working 29.9 hours/week to wage slave for no benefits isn't what people call a fair wage, even though you might think it is based on "local competition". The pandemic isn't over either- if it's something where you're in bad working conditions and having to risk yourself with no PPE, it's no wonder you're not getting people.
That said, unemployment bonus is one of the few things preventing mass unrest right now. Imagine Portland, just everywhere with more than 50,000 people. When people get kicked out of their home, have no job, and no food either; how do you think it's going to work out?

Read the may congressional CBO report. 44% of the jobs that were lost from covid literally do not exist anymore, people will still be looking for work in Q4 of 2021. That was also a best case- It's going to be much worse, since we'll have a W-shaped recovery and shit-all for stimulus.
Rioters will be the least of our problems in a few months. I'm trying to order last minute SHTF / my internet is gone oh shit oh fuck type gear, but supply chains are already looking bad embedded/RF), but totally unable to relocate to NM from PA. Helping take care of family here.

That particular spot has on-site housing; the guy I know up there rents a 3 bedroom house at about $450/mo... so you might be able to take your family with you.
